Jennifer Miller is a third year senior in the college of Health and Human Services at Kent State University. She is majoring in Healthcare Administration with plans to graduate at the end of 2015. She is in the Honors College as well as her school’s chapter of the National Society for Collegiate Scholars. Her presentation will be on research done regarding Perfectionism and how it affects work performance. The study focuses on timeliness and quality of work and the pros and cons of having perfectionistic tendencies.