Debris

Adrianna Schommer

I can't breathe,
A wave of sorrow envelopes me,
My lungs are collapsing as my mind shuts down,
My heart continues to beat although it makes a shattering sound,
I recall all the moments we've shared since the day you said hello,
Unfortunately, things are different now you see,
Since the day you said goodbye,
Everything's gone dark as the wave crashes down,
My heart torn in two as my body starts to drown,
I try to reach for the surface, but darkness is all I see,
The wave washes away the scattered remains,
I wake up on the beach and all I see is the debris,
The debris that once was whole and looked like me.
